Agency-Wide Responses

Please describe the steps the agency has taken to detect and recover improper payments.

ANSWER:

Indicate root cause	Indicate mitigation strategy/corrective action(s) taken	Provide any additional detail (optional free text)	Select the actual completion date for action(s) taken
11. Administrative or Process Errors Made by: Other Party (e.g., participating lender, health care provider, or any other organization administering Federal dollars)	Other (free text)		Other

Question 2 Free Text: Detecting and Recovering Improper Payments (PIIA Section: 3352(e), 3352(e) (1))

Based on your selection(s) above, provide additional information below. Please note there is a 3000 character limit.

ANSWER: The methods for detecting and recovering Improper Payments vary by payment stream type.

For the Grants payment stream (the only payment stream that is susceptible to Improper Payments), overpayments principally consist of unallowable costs drawn by grantees or missing or insufficient supporting documentation. Overpayments in grants are identified through statistical sampling and through various non-statistical reviews. EPA recovers overpayments by establishing a receivable and collecting money or offsetting future payment requests. Recipients selected for non-statistical reviews are chosen by grants management officers' assessments. Using a standard protocol, an onsite or desk review is performed, and each recipient's administrative and financial management controls are examined. The reviews include an analysis of the recipient's administrative policies and procedures and the testing of a judgmental sample of three non-consecutive draws. In addition, EPA uses single audits and OIG audits as a means of identifying and recovering improper payments. EPA also identifies Improper Payments from enforcement actions, grant adjustments, and recipient overdraws.

For both the Clean Water and Drinking Water State Revolving Funds, EPA identifies and recovers Improper Payments during the state review process. EPA Regions are required to conduct annual reviews of each of its state SRF programs including some transaction testing done with Headquarters staff. The remaining agency appropriated Hurricane Sandy funds are for SRF projects and so are reviewed at the same time as the CWSRF and DWSRF reviews. All three of these programs recently became no longer considered susceptible to improper payments but the agency Office of Water maintains a rigorous 50-state annual review process.

Payroll, Purchase Cards, Travel, and Commercial Payments (Contracts, Commodities, and Disaster Relief Funds) have very low IP rates. They are typically detected by internal reviews and recovered by adjustments or repayments and, if necessary, establishing an account relievable. For employees with improper payments through purchase cards, travel, or incorrect payroll payments, recoveries are made through payroll deductions, or in the case of separated employees through the establishment of accounts receivable and if necessary, through the Treasury.

Question 3: Recovery Audits (PIIA Section: 3352)

Please describe the steps the agency has taken to recover improper payments identified in recovery audits. Please note there is a 3000 character limit.

ANSWER: Past experience has demonstrated that the low dollar value of improper payments recovered by an external payment recapture auditor resulted in an effort that was not cost-effective for the Agency or the contractor. Therefore, EPA no longer uses a payment recapture audit firm to conduct formal payment recapture audits.

Question 4: Excluded Programs (PIIA Section: 3352(e) (7))

Please list any programs the agency excluded from review under its payment recapture audit program because a payment recovery audit program was determined to not be cost-effective and provide a summary of the justification used to make that determination. Please note there is a 3000 character limit.

ANSWER: None

Question 5: Financial and Administrative Controls (PIIA Section: 3357(d))

Please describe your agency's progress:

- Implementing the financial and administrative controls established by OMB in OMB Circular A-123 to identify and assess fraud risks and design and implement control activities in order to prevent, detect, and respond to fraud, including improper payments; the fraud risk principle in the Standards for Internal Control in the Federal Government published by the Government Accountability Office (commonly known as the "Green Book"); and Office of Management and Budget Circular A-123, with respect to the leading practices for managing fraud risk;
- Identifying risk and vulnerabilities to fraud, and
- Establishing strategies, procedures, and other steps to curb fraud.

ANSWER:

2 – Established	2 – Established	2 – Established	2 – Established

Question 5 Free Text: Financial and Administrative Controls (PIIA Section: 3357(d))

Based on your selection(s) above, provide additional information below. Please note there is a 3000 character limit.

ANSWER: To increase fraud awareness and create an organizational culture that is committed to combating fraud, the agency continued to consider all risk factors—strategic, operational, and fraud—when determining the overall effectiveness of the agency’s internal control system. As required in the agency’s FY 2020 Guidance for Strategic Reviews and Internal Controls, which integrates strategic review and internal control processes, national program and regional offices described and documented the internal controls in place to address risk associated with the strategic goals and objectives outlined in the FY 2018-2022 EPA Strategic Plan, as well as for administrative and financial processes. The offices conduct reviews and use the GAO's Green Book as the basis for determining whether the organization’s system of internal control is designed, implemented, and operating effectively. The EPA senior management certifies to the soundness of internal controls within the organization and provides a personal statement of assurance that supports the Administrator's overall statement of assurance on the agency's internal control system.

As part of its payment integrity program, the EPA regularly identifies and assesses a variety of risk factors, including fraud risk, in payment streams such as payroll, grants, contracts, travel and purchase cards. Programs with the potential for elevated fraud risk are evaluated as part of the risk assessment process under the PIIA. The assessments determined that the level of risk for these payment streams is low and that the controls were operating effectively. Updated risk assessments are required at least once every three years. In addition, as part of its payment integrity program, the EPA continues to work with the OIG to identify as improper payments any confirmed fraud cases resulting in criminal restitution.

As outlined in the Statement on Auditing Standards Number 122, Consideration of Fraud in a Financial Statement Audit, AU-C Section 240, the Chief Financial Officer engaged in a conversation with the Inspector General on the processes for identifying, responding to and monitoring the risk of fraud in the agency.
